Big Out For

SYDNEY, Monday

Mr. Heffron, said public works in £1-million a week

In a New Year message he said the year would be marked by major expansion in all fields of Government administration.

Expenditure on all vital services, such as health, education and transport would reach new peaks, he said.

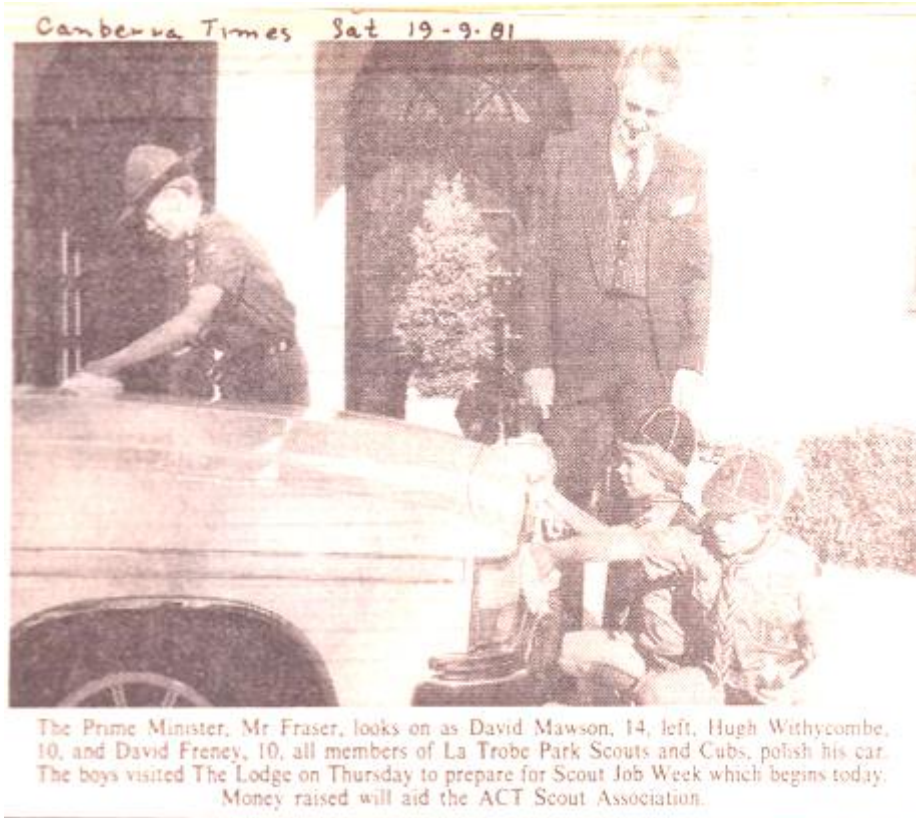

Mr. Heffron said a statement next March on construction of the giant Blowering Dam on the Tumut River, would highlight the Government public works programme.

Blowering Dam would cost £23 million to complete and would be an integral part of the Snowy Mountains hydroelectric scheme.

New Farms

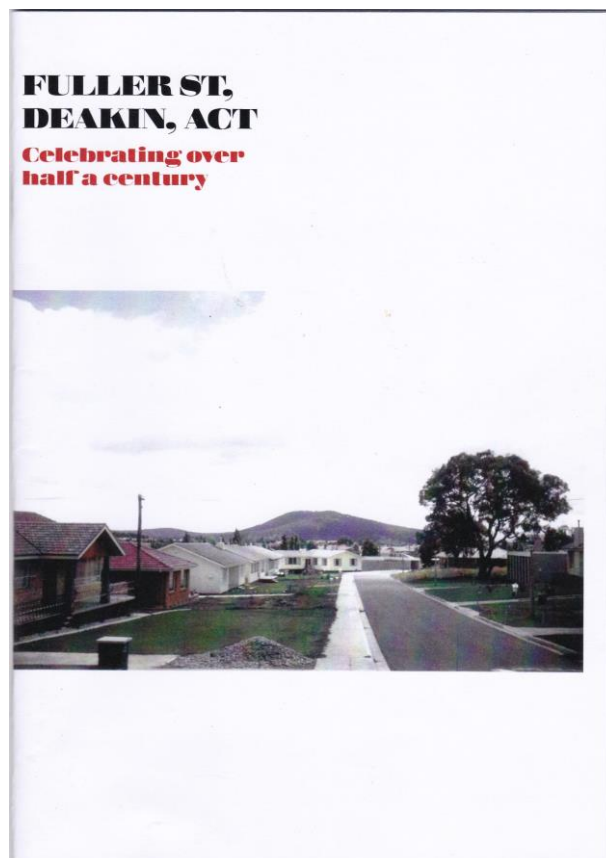

In addition to the construction cost, the Government would have to provide another £5-million to construct the distribution works and to establish new farms on the Coleambally and Murrumbidgee irrigation areas.

In the coming year, the Housing Commission would expand its building programme to the limits of financial capacity, Mr. Heffron said.
